Sexual Harassment in Rental Housing

Fair Housing Laws

The federal Fair Housing Act and North Carolina State Fair Housing Act prohibit discrimination against individuals based on race, color, religion, national origin, sex, familial status, and disability.

Sexual harassment is discrimination under fair housing laws.

It is illegal for your landlord to try to evict you or raise your rent for reporting sexual harassment.

It is also illegal to coerce, intimidate, or interfere with a person seeking to exercise rights under the Fair Housing Act.

What is Sexual Harassment?

There are generally two types of sexual harassment: Quid Pro Quo and Hostile Environment. Often victims of sexual harassment suffer from both.

1. Quid Pro Quo, or "This for That," harassment is when a housing provider asks for sex or sexual favors to avoid eviction or in exchange for free rent, repairs, excused late payments or fees, etc.
2. A Hostile Environment is when a housing provider creates a threatening or uncomfortable environment because of unwanted sexual behavior. Examples include: when your landlord enters your unit without permission, makes unwanted sexual advances or comments, touches you, or threatens to evict you if you turn down his sexual advances.

Sexual harassment can come from a landlord, owner, manager, employee, or neighbor.

It does not matter if the harasser is male or female.

How to Stop Sexual Harassment

What to do if you are the victim of sexual harassment in your housing:

- Contact the Fair Housing Project.
- Contact your local sexual assault/ domestic violence agency.
- Keep any documents related to the harassment.
- Keep a journal of incidents of sexual harassment.
- Do not wait until you are evicted before you report sexual harassment.

If your landlord has "ideas" about repairing your unit, collecting "rent," or "lending a hand," we have some ideas, too.
